All health and social care staff are likely to come into contact with someone who is bereaved, or a situation around the time of a person's death. This includes those working in non-clinical, administrative and other support roles, as well as staff in teams which are directly patient or client-facing.

Knowing how to manage these situations is important – so we as staff can support and help other people, whilst also looking after our own wellbeing.

But thinking of what to say to someone who is bereaved, whether that be a family member, patient, person who we are supporting, or perhaps a colleague may feel daunting.

This webinar will provide an introduction to grief and bereavement. It may help those attending feel more confident in answering questions about bereavement such as:

- What should I say to someone who tells me they have recently been bereaved?
- Are there particular words I should or shouldn't use?
- What if I say the 'wrong' thing?
- Is it normal to be upset if someone we know from work dies?
